In the subject line write “RESEARCH ESSAY”

The final essay will serve as a culmination of the course. It will draw on the summarization skills of Essay No. 1 and the analytical skills of Essay No 2, along with the research skills that undergraduates should develop.

Each student will choose a contemporary public debate, gather resources, and construct a compelling argument. Three topics are OFF THE TABLE: free college, eating meat, and “is the Internet making people stupid?” Anything else can work. However, the topic must be debatable—one of those cases in which “reasonable people” disagree. A poor choice would be: “Was Charles Dickens born in 1812?” There is no debate on this topic. Another poor choice would be something like “Do ancient extra-terrestrials control human destiny?” A good choice might be “Should elections in the U.S. be publicly funded?”

This is a research essay, and each student is required to quote a minimum of three sources. Four or five or more sources may be appropriate. At the minimum, one source must be a BOOK; one must be a peer-reviewed journal ARTICLE (to be explained later); and the other source can be any other print or electronic item. Articulate a clear argument and support it with reasons and evidence.

PROPOSAL

Write an essay proposal—no more than one page in length—that will inform and entice your reader. Answer the following questions: What is your topic? Why this topic? Do you have a personal connection to it? Why would this topic matter to you or anyone? What do you expect to learn?

STEPS

1. Brainstorm topics.
2. Enter notes in a paper notebook or a Word file with a name like “Essay 3 Notes.”
3. Develop and refine research questions and outline ideas.
4. Find a minimum of three sources: book, peer-reviewed article, and one other.
5. Create a working bibliography (later, your works cited will be drawn from this).
6. Write and submit your proposal.
7. Read your sources carefully and take notes in your notebook/file.
8. Write a well-organized essay, in multiple paragraphs, with an argument.
9. Email a first draft and discuss in a video conference with Dr. Abraham.
10. Generate corrections based on the conference and submit the final draft.

SUGGESTED TOPICS

These are simply suggestions. You are welcome to brainstorm any other ideas (with three exceptions noted above).

- Should the penny be abolished?
- Should the legal drinking age be lowered or raised even higher?
- Does the U.S. incarcerate too many of its citizens?
- Should the federal minimum wage be increased?
- Should English be made the national language of the U.S.?
- Is health care a human right?
- Are standardized tests good for education?
- Is Google a monopoly?
- Are we living in the golden age of television?

- At the end of the essay, include a list of works cited.

REFLECTIVE LETTER

When you submit the FINAL DRAFT, the last page of your submission should be in the form of a letter to Dr. Abraham. This will be a reflective account of your writing process. Write no more than one page and discuss the following:

How do you feel about this essay? What questions do you still have? Where was the text produced? How much time did it take? What strategies were employed? What steps did you take? How did you benefit from instructor comments?
